

Subject: children's pool
From: "Dan Byrnes" <school@nightowlpc.com>
Date: Sat, 21 Nov 2009 19:10:39 -0800
To: <harassed@san.rr.com>

I found this email address when looking for who I can complain to about the harassing people at the Children's Pool in La Jolla.

While it is nice that they drive away the tourists and leave the beach open, I have a problem with the activists harassing the children. I have witnessed the activists telling the children that if they don't leave them and their parents will go to jail. The kids get scared. Don't the activists have to respect boundaries? The beach is open (at least it was when I was there last, I haven't been in a few weeks because of the harassment).

Also, isn't the beach supposed to be cleaned? I thought the city or state had an obligation to clean the beaches. I have read that the Children's Pool beach and surrounding beaches are the most polluted beaches in San Diego. I thought La Jolla was supposed to be a tourist attraction. Isn't polluted beaches defeating that goal?

Finally, the activists are saying that we are interfering with the seals natural habitat. Isn't the Children's Pool a man made beach? How is that natural habitat? That is sort of like saying the Zoo is their natural habitat.